LITTLE WORLDS IN GLASS

Welcome to Marvin’s World

A letter for schools & districts

Dear Teachers, Principals, and School Teams,

Hello — I’m Ryan Ingle, creator of Little Worlds in Glass and of Marvin’s World, a calm, low-stimulation cartoon series for ages 2–8. Marvin is a big gold severum fish who looks after his tank friends — Pip, Pebble, Gus the snail, and the Cory Crew — in a planted freshwater aquarium.

Marvin’s World was made for the quieter moments of the school day: morning meeting, circle time, calm-down corners, and indoor recess. In each short episode, a gentle voice reads the story aloud while the words light up on screen. The movement is slow, the colors are soft, and there are no loud sounds or fast cuts. Every story carries one simple lesson — sharing, taking turns, staying calm, being kind, and looking out for friends at every pace.

Season 1 is complete and free to watch on YouTube, in Read-Along and Spanish editions, and new seasons are arriving through this school year. Around the episodes, teachers can draw on free and low-cost companions, all gathered in the Teachers Desk at the bottom of our website:

- Watch in the classroom — the Season 1 Read-Along playlist, in story order
- Free calm games — no timers, no scores, no fail states
- A free 5-page coloring sampler, with full coloring books available on Amazon
- Real-tank calm corner posters in our Teachers Pay Teachers store — including a free “Hello, Friend” poster

Marvin’s World is shared for educational purposes, and every episode is made for kids. We would be glad to welcome your students — a good first step is one episode at quiet time, and we’d love to hear how your class settles in with Marvin.
